eyes and hair, his complexion and size. Registrars, however, have been instructed by the state board to register all who voted in the 1914 election as it is clearly the intent of the law that they should be automatically registered, provided they are still qualified voters.

Any person who becomes a voter after the regular registration period loses may, on application, be registered on application not less than ten nor more than twenty days before the election in which he desires to participate.

In an opinion to the state election board Monday the attorney general holds that it is not necessary for women to register. They are entitled to participate in school district elections only, and registration, the attorney general says, is not necessary. The state election board has addressed a communication to all county and precinct registrars, urging them to see that all voters of their precincts, regardless of their party affiliation, are registered, to the end that no one will be disfranchised.

GOVERNOR WILLIAMS ORDERS GASOLINE PROBE

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE ONE) In her borders than in any other state in the country gasoline has been selling higher in Oklahoma City and other points in the state than in any other part of the country.

On Friday of last week gasoline sold in Kansas City for 18 cents a gallon; in Fort Worth for 20 cents; Chicago for 18 cents, and the price of gasoline had gone 25 cents.

If that condition exists you may be assured it will be investigated and the price put down to what is not "debatable," said Assistant Attorney General John B. Harrison, in a statement of the office.

He said no would make an investigation.

The matter of gravity of gasoline is another thing that will probably be taken up in the probe when it starts. Gasoline users say the grade gasoline is very poor and contains much oil.

GIRL OF SIXTEEN DECORATED FOR HER BRAVE ACTS

RUSSIAN SISTER OF CHARITY ALSO IS PRESENTED WITH COVETED MEDALS

Petrograd, May 2.—The bravers of the woman soldiers who have managed to get into the Russian army are again strikingly recalled by the decoration bestowed upon a Russian sister of charity. Mademoiselle Ivanoff, and the proposed decoration of Tatja Kakourine, a girl sixteen years of age.

Mademoiselle Ivanoff, finding herself close to a company which had lost all its officers, placed herself at the head and captured a hostile trench before which the troops were hesitating. Mortally wounded she was, by Imperial command, decorated with the cross of St George to reward her, a distinction to which only officers are entitled.

Tatja, a girl with masculine name, set into a regiment in much the same circumstances and the same disguise as her mother, joined a corps in 1877. At the time her Russian company in the war against a regiment serving in Galicia. For identity became known the girl was a long time the men had concealed her from the authorities. The officer discovered the truth accidentally. He wished to take the soldier to his orderly on account of "his" good conduct and youth and had summoned "him" to his quarters. He was struck by the face and eyes; he asked questions and the girl began crying but finally burst into tears and confessed. The girl shared all the difficulties of the service and all the dangers of battle with the others. Her bravery has been the model of her male companions. She has a pleasing appearance, a round face, shining with health, and looks well in uniform. The men protect her by common accord and stand to her as father and mother with touching solicitude. She has just been proposed for the cross and medal of St. George.

He said no could make an investigation.

For the love of Mike and Basil, with Pathé Lachman, Louise Orth and Dan Russell. In three dreams, a faun-like comedy than this has almost have been terrible. The audience is in danger of total oblivion, whatever that is. Pathé Lachman is "The Jewish Lion," a "box master" who is in love with Louise. He croaks around so long that papa and grandpa try to throw him out. They can't so they send for Dan Russell. "The Irish terror," Dan scares the lion away, but refuses to go himself, and the "lion" is bribed to get rid of the "terror." Finally the audience at the prize fight jumps into the ring, which collapses, and the climax is the most exuberantly funny finish ever registered on the screen.

Wednesday, May 3.

"Two Men of Sandy Bar," with Hobart Bosworth, Emory Johnson, Grichen Ledeger and Yona Landowska. From the novel of the same name by Bret Harte, whose tales of the brave days of '49 are still recalled by thousands of Americans. Only the tremendous resources of the Universal could have produced so note worthy as achievement. The human appeal of the story itself is universal.
